Week's Contest Proves Popularity Among the Workers.

MYSTIC PUZZLE FOR THIS WEEK

- 1—Vehement vociferation, two authors, and a poet.
- 2—The sweetest word in any language. In health.
- 3—A woman with a man's name.
- 4—An internal pain.
- 5—To increase, part of the face, an heir.
- 6—Each human head in time 'tis said, will turn to his, though he be dead.
- 7—A wild apple.
- 8—A grave writer.
- 9—More jocund than the above.
- 10—A bird-like noise, a weight.
- 11—Meat, what are you doing?
- 12—What are you doing with those vegetables?
- 13—Who is a better author than the above?
- 14—A baby poet.
- 15—A common domestic animal, and what she cannot do.
- 16—A sobriquet, a beverage.
- 17—Something more than a sandy shore.
- 18—Not one of the four points of the compass, but inclining toward one of them.
- 19—A patriot, and poet. His name is in the 22d chapter of Isaiah.
- 20—Wrote a beautiful hymn. Sur-name in Genesis. Middle name in every garden. An historic family.

Some one said to me recently, "Why don't you cut out those contests and give the readers of your page something new?"

I was really doubtful just what to do. In a letter from a puzzler every once in a while would be a request for more contests, and then last week, when there was such a deluge of answers, I had about made up my mind that the majority of readers cared for the contests and by the number of answers that have come in this morning, I am convinced that the contests should be run for a long time in the future. What say you puzzlers?

I have received a number of clever original contests from the puzzlers and I think they will prove as pleasing as the ones in the past.

After a hurried glance over the morning mail I find the puzzlers like the contest for this week. One puzzler said that it has made her think harder than she has in a long time and that she has discovered the names of some English poets and authors that she never knew before. She said that before she could solve scarcely any of them she had to look up a book containing the lives of famous English writers and then she found the contest a "clinch."

Cranberries Are Showing Improvement in Quality

With the coming on of turkey time, and Thanksgiving, cranberry shipments are beginning to show decided improvement in quality. When the first shipments began to be received several weeks ago, the berries were small, and considerable doubt existed as to whether they would improve in size. The Cape Cod fruit has shown considerable improvement in this respect lately, however, and, it is now expected, the season will be an unusually good one, both from the standpoint of quality and quantity.

There are indications that the orange market may become stronger this week. So far the Florida fruit has been rather green and exceptionally small, although all reports have been to the effect that the quality would shortly be improved upon.

The last shipments of peaches probably will come this week or before the middle of next week. Georgia shipments already have ceased. The small amount of the fruit now reaching the market is Northern-grown, having been produced principally in New York. Considering the lateness of the season, the fruit is of splendid quality and is meeting with a firm demand, which is expected to continue unabated until the end of the season.

ROUGE FOR LIPS.

Liquid rouge should be applied to the lips with a pointed stick if it must be used. This stick should be wrapped with absorbent cotton, then dip it in the rouge and paint the lips carefully and over the red part only.

IRON SPOILS RED HAIR.

It is a mistake to use the curling iron on either blonde or red hair, as it nearly always changes the color. The hair can be put up on curlers to get the wave effect. A net will protect the hair and improve the effect of the wave.

ATTRACTIVE STYLE OF HIGH SHOES

Description of Illustrations.

No. 1—Brown suede boot with monogram buttons. The buttons may be attached to any shoe.

No. 2—White button boot shown in calf, also in white cravenette. The vamp trip and trimmings of tan calf.

No. 3—A side lace boot built on a modern last.

No. 4—Child's ankle-strap patent pump with ventilated forepart.

Daily Fashion Talk.

Attention to detail is the watchword of the woman who would be modestly costumed. No detail of the wardrobe demands more attention than the several sorts of shoes and slippers which to meet the demands of fashion must be included even in a fairly simple outfit. An important item in the selection of one's footwear is the growth of the idea of buying shoes to harmonize with the costume rather than to match it as for the past few years has been the custom. "The matching idea" has run its course and nowadays wearing footwear in the same tone as one's gown is rather an evidence of poor taste.

Black suede, as well as shoes in rich hazel brown tones will be among the ultra fashionable ideas, while for the extremists the manufacturers of modish footwear are putting out boots and shoes finished with ornamental touches introducing different leathers and different tones. Another faddy notion is the monogrammed buttons, which an entirely new idea is nothing less than the revival of the old-time side lacing, the boot being built on the most modern lasts.

The woman of good taste and average pocketbook will do well to stick to black or white or any of the preferred shades of brown and buy her boots in suede, dull calf, or kid, which will be the safe mean way which makes for good form. FRANCES CARROLL.

TO PICKLE PLUMS.

To seven pounds plums, four pounds sugar, two ounces stick cinnamon, two ounces cloves, one quart vinegar, add a little mace; put in the jar first a layer of plums, then a layer of spices alternately; scald the vinegar and sugar together, pour it over the plums; repeat three times for plums (only once for cut apples and pears), the fourth time scald all together; put them into glass jars and they are ready for use.

BANG HAS TENDENCY TO SOFTEN FEATURES

Many women make a mistake in their study of the bang. They consider it a thing for children and young girls.

Quite the contrary is true. The bang softens features that are hard; it conceals the little lines around the temples; it acts as a veil for the heavy lines across the forehead, and it makes the face look more girlish.

All women of mature looks should wear the English bang. Like all things, it must be treated artistically. If even a fraction too long or a shade too heavy it will look awkward, but there is where the expert hairdresser can be relied upon; she knows how to cut a bang.

AIR AND SUNSHINE GOOD FOR THE HAIR

It is a good plan to unfasten the hair, part it in the middle, and leaving it hanging, sit for an hour or so where sun and air can get to it.

There are many women, however, who do not have time for this sort of treatment in the daytime. For them, the only thing to do is to spread the hair over the pillow at night. If you are restless and your hair gets in your face and annoys you, part it all the way across the head and plait it, very closely, in two braids, one at each ear. This allows the air to get at the inside of the hair. Never braid your hair tightly at night, or fasten it up in a knot on your head. The latter treatment is sure to bring thinness.
